INTRODUCTION

This directory lists all the organizations that we have heard from or of, which concern themselves with Afghanistan. Some are wholly devoted to the Afghan cause; others include Afghanistan in their overall programs. The amount of information given for each organization varies. We listed what information we had on the premise that something with less is better than nothing at all.

Now the caveats: Listing may imply existence but it does not imply endorsement by the Afghanistan Forum. Organizations come and go, change personnel, move; they may even defect. The full range of the political spectrum is represented - from reportedly KGB-backed groups to the ultra conservative. Almost all of the organizations want money. We recommend that you establish contact with a group before contributing to it.

We are grateful to those who took the time and trouble to fill out our questionnaire and to those who suggested other organizations for us to contact. Errors, both typographical and alphabetical, are the editor's fault.

The list is alphabetized letter by letter. So if you can't find your favorite group, keep going. If that fails, please send us the organization's name and address. We shall publish new and/or additional information in forthcoming issues of the Forum.

Listings are organized as follows: The organization's name and date of establishment; address(es); telephone number(s); officers; purposes and publications. Additional information which includes the names of political parties in the Hazarajat and a list of the more prominent organizations in the DRA appears on page 19.

We suggest that you keep your Directory up-to-date. We do not plan to do this again unless we get a computer, which seems highly unlikely.

Organization Set Up To Curb Mujahidin Activities GF091111 Karachi MASHRIQ in Urdu 4 Aug 85 p 8

[Excerpt] Peshawar, 3 Aug — An organization called "FAZA" [expansion unknown], which has been set up to create dissent among the Afghan mujahidin and to curb their activities, has been unearthed. This organization is alleged to have the support of the KGB and is active within the country and abroad. It has been set up under a well-calculated plan to control the activities of the mujahidin. While it cannot quell the fervor of the Afghan mujahidin, it has done them harm.

The existence of this organization was discovered during an investigation by the law enforcement and investigation organization. Efforts are being made to trace its members. According to informed sources, an important function of this organization is to give false reports to the authorities wherever the Afghan mujahidin are present. Numerous individuals linked to the organization are spread throughout the tented villages in which the Afghan refugees live.

MEMBERS OF THE PESHAWAR BASED ISLAMIC UNITY OF AFGHANISTAN MUJAHIDEEN

from Soldiers of Freedom, 2/87,
written by David Isby:

● Mohaz Melli Islami (NIFA — National Islamic Front of Afghanistan) of Pir Sayid Ahmed Gailani. Pro-Western in outlook, NIFA is strongest around Khandahar and among the Pathans of the border areas, from Badakhshan down to Ghazni and west to Wardak and Kabul, based on the Pir's status as a Qadiriya Sufic religious leader.

● Jebhe Milli Nejad (National Liberation Front) of Sibghatulla Modjaddidi. Pathan and Naqshbandi Sufic, this group is strong in the Jalalabad, Logar, and Khandahar areas, although numerically it is the smallest of the major parties.

● Harakat-i-Inqilabi-i-Islami (Islamic Revolutionary Movement) of Mohammed Nabi Mohammedi. Numerically large, Harakat represents much of the spirit of traditional Afghanistan. Village-based, its leaders are local mulahs. It lacks the Sufi background of other traditionalist parties. Strongest among Pathans, with widespread support, especially in Ghazni, Wardak, Koh-i-Safi, Badakhshan and Kunar. Two break-away factions are more Islamic and less traditional in outlook. ● Hezbi-i-Islami (Islamic Party) of Younis Khalis. Khalis is a moderate Islamic, strongest among Pathans. He was formerly associated with the other Hezb party. Kabul and Paktika provinces have a strong Khalis presence. Khalis himself is the only Pakistan-based leader who regularly fights inside Afghanistan. Known for hard and effective fighting, this party was a numerically small unit until 1985, when it expanded, largely at the expense of Harakat. This demonstrated a shift toward new leadership from the traditional figures embraced by the Harakat.

● Jamiat-i-Islami (Islamic Society) of Professor Burhanuddin Rabbani. A moderate Islamic, Jamiat is numerically large and strongest among the Tajiks, Uzbeks and Turkmen. Making use of the non-tribal nature of Tajik society — unlike that of the Pathans — Jamiat has benefitted from having the most effective regional commanders in Dari-speaking areas. In the past, Jamiat has been attacked by more extreme fundamentalists, Khalis being its closest ally. Jamiat has attracted Pathan supporters, especially in the Jagdalak Valley of Nangrahar. Active throughout Dari-speaking Afghanistan, Herat, Mazar-e-Sharif, Badakhshan, Takhar, Parwan, and Kapisa provinces have Jamiat strongholds.

● Ittehad-e-Islami (Islamic Alliance) of Professor Abdul Rasoul Sayeff. A late escapee from Kabul, Sayeff became chairman of the Islamic Alliance due largely to his access to money and weapons through his links with the Moslem Brotherhood and Wahabi groups in the Arab world. He attracted many guerrillas in 1982-84, but because of his lack of a firm, traditional base of authority except in parts of his native Parwan Province, many have left. He also has some influence in Kabul, Nangrahar, Paktika, and Paktia provinces.

● Hezb-i-Islami (Islamic Party) of Gulbuddin Hekmatyar. The most controversial Peshawar-based party, Hekmatyar was one of the first to take up jihad and so had many adherents. He has since been accused of being more concerned with seizing power post-war and of cooperating with the Soviets. Certainly, Hekmatyar's forces blocked the supply routes to the Panjsher in 1984, attacked Panjsheri forces in 1981, and almost every report of inter-Afghan fighting involves them. Yet other Hekmatyar commanders fight hard against the Soviets. Hekmatyar has outside Moslem support and is less tied to traditional Afghan values than any other party. Mainly Pathan, widespread, but declining.
